

SATURDAY May 13. 1721.

To the Author of the London Journal.

SIR.

Would willingly propagate and preserve the following Order of Council, as a Monument of his Majesty's great Zeal for Virtue and Religion. It is publish'd in the Gazette of the 19th of April, in the following Words:

At the Court of St. James's, the 28th Day of April 1721.

The King's most Excellent Majesty in Council.

HIS Majesty having received Information, which gives great Reason to suspect that there have lately been and still are, in and about the Cities of London and Westminster, certain scandalous Clubs or Societies of young Persons who meet together, and in the most impious and blasphemous Manner, insult the most sacred Principles of our Holy Religion, affront Almighty God himself, and corrupt the Minds and Morals of one another; and being resolved to make use of all the Authority committed to him by Almighty God, to punish such enormous Offenders, and to crush such shocking Impieties before they increase and draw down the Vengeance of God upon this Nation: His Majesty has thought fit to command the Lord Chamberlain, and his Lordship is hereby required to call together his Majesty's Justices of the Peace of Middlesex and Westminster, and strictly to enjoin them, in the most effectual Manner, that they, and every of them, do make the most diligent and careful Enquiry and Search for the Discovery of any Thing of this and the like Sort, tending in any wise to the Corruption of the Principles and Manners of Men, and to lay before his Lordship such Discoveries as from time to time may be made, to the End that all proper Methods may be taken for the utter Suppression of all such detestable Practices. His Lordship is further directed to urge them to the due Execution of their Office, in detecting and prosecuting with Vigor all Profaneness, Immorality, and Debauchery, as they value the Blessing of Almighty God, as they regard the Happiness of their Country, which cannot subsist if Things sacred and virtuous are trampled upon, and as they render his Majesty's Favour, to which they cannot recommend themselves more effectually than by shewing the utmost Zeal upon so important an Occasion; to which End his Lordship is to require them, that as his Majesty for himself has nothing more at Heart, than to regard the Honour of God, so impiously struck at, and is determined to shew all Marks of Displeasure and Discouragement to any who may lie under the Suspicion of such Practices; so he shall always account it the greatest and most substantial Service they can do to His Majesty or his Government, to exert themselves in discovering any who are guilty of such Impieties, that they may be openly prosecuted and punished with the utmost Severity and most publick Ignominy which the Laws of the Land can inflict.

Edward Southwell.

To this 'tis added, in the same Gazette, That 'His Majesty has been pleas'd to give Orders to the Principal Officers of his Household, to make strict and diligent Enquiry, whether any of his Majesty's Servants are guilty of the horrid Impieties mentioned in the Order of Council inserted above, and to make Report thereof to his Majesty.'

These Societies must certainly be as distracted as they are impious: I have indeed been in doubt till now, whether there really were any such; but I am in no doubt about the Punishment they deserve: I think it ought to be the most severe that is due to such raving Wickedness, which is such, as neither

Youth nor Wine can excuse, nor indeed extenuate; and till they are further punished, I think the darkest Holes in Bedlam ought to be their Portion. But outrageous and godless as they are, they do not merit more Detestation and Severity, than do those who inhumanly give out, that Gentlemen who abhor such Clubs are Members of them: The Authors of so dreadfull a Calumny are much worse than Murderers, because they endeavour to take away from Men something much dearer than Life: They are therefore in the Class with Demons, and earn such mighty Vengeance as God only can inflict.

The above Order of Council is very just and religious, and of excellent Use and Example: So much Zeal cannot flop at a Club or two of pernicious, tho' private Sinners, but doubtless extends to other Criminals, more publick and considerable, and even more destructive. The greatest Part of the Wickedness done by those thoughtless young Wretches, is done to themselves, and likely to remain with them; there being little Probability that they will ever make many Professors to their astonishing Phrenizes: Whereas the other great Criminals, for the sole sake of doing good to themselves, have undone almost every Man in England, with England it self into the Bargain. They set Three Nations to sale, and themselves fixing the Price, were themselves the Buyers: They purchas'd our Happiness, and paid us in Want and Sorrow. Every good Man is Proof against the Contagion of Profaneness; but Virtue and Goodness stand us in no stead against our Money Monsters, who having robb'd all honest Men, made a Jeft of Honesty it self. Can there be greater Evils under the Sun, than rampant Flunderers, abandon'd Corruption, and devouring Calamity? Or are there any other Evils which these do not produce?

We therefore take it for granted, That as his Majesty is determin'd to shew all Marks of Displeasure and Discouragement to any who may ever lie under the SUSPICION of such destructive Practices; so he will always account it the most substantial Service we can do to him and his Government, to exert ourselves in discovering any who are guilty of such unparalleled Frauds, such NATIONAL WICKEDNESS; that they may be openly prosecuted and PUNISH'D with the UTMOST SEVERITY, and most PUBLICK IGNOMINY that the Law alone can inflict.

And as ' His Majesty has been pleas'd to give Orders to the Principal Officers of his Household, to make strict and diligent Enquiry, whether any of His Majesty's Servants are guilty of the horrid Impieties mentioned in the Order of Council inserted above, and to make report thereof to his Majesty: ' So we may assure our selves, that the same severe Enquiry has been already made, whether any of those in Trust under his Majesty, or about his Person, have stain'd their Hands with honour'd their Master, and provok'd Almighty God, by promoting or embarking in any of the horrid and pre-dig'd Mischiefs, practis'd last Year by the late South Sea Directors, and their Confederates.

An Enquiry into Religion, and the private Morals of Men, is not inconsistent with an Enquiry into Civil and Publick Villainies; nor can the former ever prove a Bone of Contention to divert the latter, whatever the Wicked and the Guilty may hope, and the Honest and Distressed may apprehend. Fresh Objects of Horror and Aversion cannot lessen our general Detestation for those, who ought to be beyond all others detested. While we pursue Wolves and Tygers, and the mightier Beasts of Prey, who if they are not destroy'd, will continue to destroy; we are not to be diverted by the Scent of a Fox or a Badger, though they may annoy a private Neighbourhood, and displease Hens-roosts.

Our publick Virtue is the best and surest Proof we can give of our private Piety: Piety and Justice are inseparable; and Prayers

The Spaniels and the Fox.

A FABLE.

A Ship that was sailing before a brisk Wind, struck all at once upon a Rock, in so violent a manner that the sprung a Leak. Some Spaniels that happened to be on board, immediately prepared to save their Lives by swimming to Land. There appeared in the same Yessel to be an OLD FOX, who had a litter of Whelps. Reynard found he was like to fare but indifferently on this Occasion. Nature had not form'd him to swim; his Legs, which must keep him up, were short and small; his long Tail was a terrible Impediment, and his Whelps were even in a worse Condition than himself. Reynard, therefore, had nothing left for it, but to put on his Face of Brass, and persuade the Spaniels to take him upon their Shoulders: Accordingly, summoning all his Rhetoric to his Assistance, he accosted them in the following Manner: Gentlemen, says he, I find you are providing for your Safety, and fancy that your Strength and Courage will soon carry you thro' the Waves, directly to the Shore. I must confess I am not at all surprised, that you should flatter your selves with this hope; for tho' the Sea is somewhat rough, we are not a great Way from Land: But I am by Profession a Pilot, and perfectly well acquainted with these Coasts, do assure you, upon my own certain Knowledge, that if you take what you imagine to be the shortest and most direct way, you will meet with several Whirlpools that will infallibly suck you in and destroy you. What I am going to propose to you, is not with the least view to my own Interest; but it would be an unpeakeable Affliction to me to see so many gallant Persons perish; I have been beating my Brains to consider what we shall do in the present Calamity, and can find no Expedient for our common Safety but this One. You see, Gentlemen, this small Plank; if you will but allow me to lay it over your Backs, and fasten it with a small Thong about your Necks, I myself will get upon it, and be your Pilot and Steersman; while you exert all your Strength to make Land, I who shall then be mounted above you, and may look about me, will direct you when to bear to the Right, and when to the Left, so that we may avoid those dreadful Whirlpools I have told you of. The Service I design to do you in this Capacity of a Pilot, will much more than make you amends for the Burthen you will carry; for you see, Gentlemen, I am but ONE, and I assure you none of the heaviest neither.

The honest, good-natured Spaniels were easily induced to believe what this smooth-tong'd Knave affirmed with so much Assurance. They all together get into the Water, the Plank is laid upon their Backs, and fastened as Reynard directed, who no sooner saw himself commodiously seated than he pulled down the whole Litter of Whelps to him. The poor Spaniels were not a little surprized at this additional and unexpected Weight: However, as there was now no Time to lose in Expostulations, away they swam under the Direction of their new Pilot. Reynard to show his Skills, and keep up his Reputation, prevented their taking the most easy to the Shore, which they might otherwise perhaps have reached, notwithstanding the Load they struggled under. In short, he made them tack about so often, that at last the poor Curs, whose Hearts were quite broke with swimming, and could no longer support their insatiable Burthen, were all drowned. The pains the generous Creatures had taken was of no Use to themselves, but just served to bring the Fox and his Whelps so near the Shore, that these worthless Animals were saved, while those who preferred them perished.

On Thursday Thomas Vernon, Esq; was expelled the House of Commons for attempting to corrupt General Ross, one of the Committee of Secrecy, on Mr. Aislabie's Account; and the House voted Thanks to General Ross for his Information.

We hear the Bill said to be against Blasphemy and Profaneness, relates not only to any lewd or immoral Practices, or to the horrid Clubs so oft mentioned of late; but was intended to compel, by further Penalties, the Clergy and Dissenting Teachers to more frequent Subscriptions to the First Article of the Church; about the Sense of which they who have already subscr'd are so divided.

Tis said that Mr. Aislabie has settled two thousand five hundred Pound a Year upon his Wife, and made ample Provision for his Children besides; which, as 'tis reported, there's no like Reason to believe was all done since some Detestable Villaines were put in Execution; 'tis hoped the unhappy Sufferers will not be depriv'd of the Benefit of it.

Near 1000 Houses are consumed, but none of the Ships, being a touch'd, it would have done much more mischief had it not begun near the River, and burnt along the Side of it. The Damage however is exceeding great, and the Defoliation incalpable.

We Cherokees, to prevent the Indians' being exposed to the whites, and are now fully up to Mr. Allerton's suggestion, so the Indians can be brought the King's Message, to Carlisle, and at the latter, a debate, on Major Pitt's bill, by the Indians, in their dress. They have shown that they were then largely uneducated and highly compensated by all the old men up among the Indians to know right and wrong, as not to be satisfied by other white power, Carlisle, &c. They bring political and business men of the white, by taking of all information, as Tammie King, Weston, Thompson, Franklin, Sampson, Pitt, or Redick of the Shawnees, and keeping it all a living and reverent remembrance. They have also not so much trouble, and admiration in having the Head, that they only give it those capable Indians to the Head, but the Indians do not dare to be present before Gold. They are of a grandeur, and physical power, without the Indians of Montana, told only by Mr. Allerton and his party, when we were at Carlisle, and we shew that in Edinburgh, in Scotland, there is a Grand Lodge, which has been meeting for a week, but very safe power displayed.
